New Hong Kong exhibition for Anthony White

Artist Anthony White with some works from his current exhibition

The first solo show of works by young Australian artist Anthony White has been unveiled in Hong Kong at the Cat Street Gallery. 'Informal Relations' is one man's study and fascination with painting - and more specifically form, texture, and the process of abstraction. His majestic, contemplative and powerful works, reveal tantalizing hints of landscape and dazzle with thoughtful hues and tones.

Originally from Sydney but now based in Paris, the artist comes from the gestural abstract painting school that has emerged from Australia in the last decade. White's work draws immediately from his response to the landscape and urban environment. His work is included in a number of prominent private collections including the collection of the costume designer Catherine Martin and filmmaker Baz Luhrmann.
